PREFACE.

SOON after the commencement of the late Maligant Fever in our city, a fhort account of which is now aid before the Public, two of my particular friends were eized with all its fymptoms. On them, I thought it my uty to attend, that I might render fuch affiftance as y in my power. A few days after the difeafe began o foread its direful influence in the vicinity of my place f refidence, and I refolved to pay the fame attention to ay neighbours as I was willing to do to my friends, for this refolution, however, I claim no merit: For as the ituation of my family was fuch as to render it improper, t leaft inconvenient to move, and finding myfelf furounded with peftilence, I firmly believed, that I was qually fafe, while performing the common duties of hunanity, to the afflicted, as fitting useless in my own apar ment; nay more, had I remained inactive, my mind light have become a prey to melancholy, and I should, all probability, have been oppreffed with fear, than vhich there is not a greater predifponent caufe to diforer, nor perhaps an equal cause in making its terminaon fatal. Reafoning in this manner, and trufting in livine Providence for protection, I therefore determied to make no hefitation in visiting any sick perfon to 'hom I could be ufeful.

THE PREFACE.

On the 1st September, the Health Commission having heard that I was not afraid of feeing the infecte wished me to enter into their fervice. I agreed, from that day continued employed by them, and a to wards by the Health Committee, till the termination the difease.

In this fituation, I had daily opportunities of fact the progress of the fever, the treatment of the fick, a manner in which the poor were relieved, &c. and the Magistrates were so obliging as to permit me to he recourse to their papers for information with respect the donations, and the names of the dead, I was indicato venture on the prefent publication.

My aim, in every page, has been truth and accu cy, without embellifhment. How far I have fuces ed, I cannot at prefent determine; but of this I am (tain, I meant well, and have ufed my utmost endean) to render the work as fatisfactory to the public, as pufible.

MALIGNANT FEVER.

5 A. 4 Health-Office, August 6, 1798. TO THE MAYOR.

SIR,

THE unfinished fituation of the docks in Front-Street. between Coenties and the Old-flip, generally, was, in the opinion of the Commissioners of the Health-Office, a fource of difease in that neighbourhood last year, and oc. cafioned the death of feveral valuable citizens. At that period it became a fubject of remonstrance to the Common Council.

The Commissioners cannot fufficiently regret, that they have reason to renew their remonstrances on this subject, and that its prefent fituation is likely to be productive of fill greater evils than those of last year.

Several perfons have fickened in the neighbourhood of these unfinished grounds within a week, and with symptoms strikingly characteristic of Yellow-Fever.

If the Common Council think proper to appoint two of their members, the Commissioners will meet them early to-morrow-morning, to concert measures adapted to the exigency of the cafe.

I am refpectfully,

Sir,

Your most obedient fervant, RICHARD BAYLEY, Health Officer.

On the fame day they isfued an advertisement, notifying their determination to put the laws in force with respect to those who should be delinquent in regard to keeping the ftreets clean, before their respective doors, and in remoying dirt from their yards and cellars, adding that the freet inspectors, whose immediate duty it was to attend to that bufinels, were directed to report all offences of this nature to the police, and that the penalty against offenders would be rigidly exacted.

At the time of this advertisement, however, it was remarked both by citizens and ftrangers, that our ftreets were kept uncommonly clean; but with respect to yards and cellars, I have reason to believe that, to the difgrace of may add, that where fuch huifapces have existed, ' habitants of that vicinity have generally been the levereft fufferers.

AN ACCOUNT OF THE

By fome people our Commiffioners have been cenfured. for neglecting to notify the citizens officially of the danger to which they were expoled, to foon as they became acquainted with the ex ence of any malignant or pefli-Jential fever in the city Such centure, however, appears, to me to be very unjust : for the exiltence of fome cafes of fever was univerfally known towards the middle of Augult, and became the fubject of general converfation. The Commissioners never denied it, nor did they attempt to conceal it : But as it was the opinion of most people, that it was not probable the diforder would foread, and that it would vanifh after facrificing a few individuals, as had happened in the years 1795 and 1797, fuch a publication, whilft it could have been of no ule to the inhabitants, who were well acquainted with their huation, might have been highly prejudicial to our commerce, by detarring country people from coming amongh them, at a time, when according to every appearance, they could pals and repais to our city in perfect falety, and without running any rifque of receiving infection.

On the 12th, 13th, and 14th of August, there was heavy showers of rain; that on the 14th, commenced at four in in the morning, and continued without the least intermisfion, until nine with confiderable thunder: The quantity which fell during these five hours, was supposed to be greater than had at any time fallen, during the same space of time for many years. The streets were covered with water, in many places knee deep, and a valt number of cellars were filled with it.

It was at the time, generally believed, that this exceffive rain and thunder would to purify the air, that our city would in a few days be totally exempt from any cafes of the diforder, but alas! our expectations in this refpect, were dreadfully difappointed : for from this day, it almost immediately began to fpread in every direction. But, however erroneous, the ideas of many have been with refpect to this circumflance, feverals thought very differondy ; in particular, a writer in the Commercial Advertir, on the evening of the 14th, the day on which this coffive rain fell, who feems to have forefeen what would neeptils and configuences of it. His language is to remembrale test 1 and a bear to quote it. ""The im-E. she, " which have lately failen, ree de tra ser actor while it is a marked on the fireets, fhould excite a degree or distribute the, when the effects of its remaining ftagnant is considered. Many cellars mult no doubt have been the ready all for much of the rain which has fallen: it the scheme behaves every perfon, without delay, to examine these cellars and other places, which are likely to become re ervoirs of water, and fhould any be found, immediate terps should be taken to remove it. Stagnant water in contined places, during this hot weather, will, in two days, exhale a peililent water, which may generate the most dangerous infectious diforders, to prevent which, after the removal of the water, a liberal use of line fuould be made by fcattering it over the cellar. It is to be hoped that a regard to felf-prefervation will produce the molt prompt and active exertions towards this alarning object; those who neglect it, will be amongst the first victums of a ravaging difeafe, which a little timely attention might have kept from our at prefent healthy city-"

A day or two after, in the fame paper, a writer, after mentioning the late floods of water, obferves, that " If immediate and vigorous measures are not taken to oblige people to have their cellars emptied and well ventilated and dried, one week will produce in this city, a more malignant fickness than Philadelphia now experiences, or than New-York has witheffed fince its first feugement."

My intention in quoting thefe extracts, is to put our eitizens on guard against an indolent fecurity, should we be again attacked by the Yellow-Fever: For heat and moifture combined will ever produce putrid vapours, and thefe, from the earliest ages of physic, have been almost universally allowed to be the fource of pestilential dilorders.

Our Health-Commissioners, on this occasion, certainly deferved well of the public. Their utmost endeavours were exerted to have every nuisance removed, and as far as lay in their power, to prevent the spreading of the difease, with which we then began to be afflicted. Their endeavours, however, were ineffectual, as the number of deaths from this time almost daily encreased.

AN ACCOUNT OF THE

About the 24th numbers began to leave the city, an many of those who had offices for the transaction of but nefs in that part of the city which lies towards the Eafl R ver, moved to Broadway, which was deemed more her: thy. The Cuftom-Houle, likewife, in Mill-freet, an the Infurance-Office in Water-ftreet, were fixed for Lin time in the Tontine-City-Tavern, in Broadway. During the whole month of August, the number of deaths amount ed to one hundred and thirty three men, fifty five wome and one hundred and forty one children, making in all three hundred and twenty nine. As particular attention had not been hitherto paid by the fextons to diffinguil those who fell victims to the fever, from those who had died of any other diforder, it is difficult to afcertain the precife numbers. Perhaps, if it be fixed at one hundred we shall not be far from the truth, particularly as it a certain that by far the greatest number of the children wer cut off by the flux, a diforder which generally proves tal to infants at this feafon of the year. On the 15th Au gult the deaths were 14, from which day the number wa ftill progrelling, fo that on the 1ft September, they amount The daily average during August was about : 10 23.

On the 15th of Sept. the number of funerals were 5 on the awful toth, they were no lefs than 63, and on ca of the two days following, they were reduced to 40, from which circumflance we began to entertain hopes that ou mortal foc was about to leave us, but we were again dil appointed, for the next four days it kept fluctuating be tween 41 and 50, and on the 26th role up to 60. TI total number of deaths, during this month, was elever hundred and filty two, of whom nine hundred and fil four died of lever. Six bundred and forty eight, wen men, three hundred and fifty four women, and and out hundred and fifty two children. The daily average the themonth was about 38. By the 15th of this month, our fituation was known at a diffance, as on that day a proclmation was iffued by James Cahoun, efgr Mayor of Bal timore, prohibiting the entrance into the city of Baltimon or within three miles thereof, of all perfons whom foever, who had come from the cities of New-York or Philadel plia, or from Wilmington in the ftate of Delaware, an forbidding the citizens of Baltimore from having any communication with them, until they could produce an approved certificate of their abfence from those places at leaft 15 days previous thereto."

Our number of dead on the 1ft October was 47, and this was the greatest numberduring the whole month. On the 18th it was reduced to 16, and on the 21ft it only amounted to g. After this, the number of deaths on any one day during the exiftence of the calamity, did not exceed 15, and it is certain that had our ablent citizens attended to the advice of the Health-Committee, as publifhed in the different newspapers about this time, diffuading them from a premature return, the death warrant of the diforder might have been dated from about this day ; but it is greatly to be regretted, that numbers of our valuable citizens, by not attending to this admonition, are now tenants of the grave, who, had they only remained till after the froft, which took place in the latter end of October and beginning of November, might have now, very probably, been in good health. The whole number of funerals for October, was five hundred and twenty two, two hundred and nine of whom were men. one hundred and fifty eight women, and feventy four children. Of these four hundred and thirty one died of fever. The average of the deaths, during this month, was about 17. On the 10th November, the deaths were only 5, and on each of the preceding days, they were only 2. The total number during thele to days, were 82, of whom 41 were men, twenty two women, and twenty children. Of thefe thirty nine died of the fever ; the daily average was about 8. The following address of the Committee now made its appearance in all the new feapers :--

"The Health-Committee for the relief of the fick and indigent in the city of New-York, beg leave to congratulate their fellow-citizens, that under Divine Providence, this long afflicted city is once more reftored to its ufual flate of general health, and with the molt heartfelt pleafure inform thole who yet remain in exile, that although a few cafes of the peftilential fever exitts, yet that by the late cold weather and froft, the contagion is fo far defiroyed as to vender the return of their families to the city perfectly fafe, provided they take the necellary previous mefures of cleanfing and ventilating their long unaired dy

lings, and purifying the bedding and clothing which may have been left therein during the prevalence of the fever.

It would have afforded the Committee much fatisfaction could they have given this invitation at an earlier period, but they did not conceive themfelves warranted by the them exifting circumftances. There have, until the prefent moment, been feveral new cafes of fever, particularly among those citizens who returned earlier than the Committee thought prudent; many of whom have fallen victims to the devouring peftilence. This, among other circumftances, has induced the Committee to withhold this invitation until the prefent time. The Committee beg leave further to inform their fellow citizens, that from the numerous applications from the indigent for relief, they find it abfolutely neceffary to continue their labours fome time longer."

The refult of the whole number of deaths, during this awful calamity, was two thouland and eighty-lix, viz. eleven hundred and ten men, five hundred and eighty-nine women and eight hundred and eighty-live children. Of thefe, if we admit that one hundred died of the fever in August, its victims would amount to one thousand five hundred and twenty-four. A great many of our cuizens too, who fled, were likewife cut off by it, hence it is probable, that the fum of deaths would be between two thoufand four hundred, and two thousand five hundred : An awful number indeed ! Particularly if we confider that more than one third, fome fuppofe that one half of the inhabitants, had left the city.

An opinion prevailed with many, that the progrefs of the difeafe varied according to the flate of the atmosphere. To this I have paid fome attention; but have not been able to afcertain that the opinion is correct. My readers, however, by comparing the table of Meteorological Obfervations with that which contains the daily returns of the dead, will be able to fatisfy themfelves in this particular. But, however doubtful I may be with respect to the above obfervations in general, I am certain, that cool mornings and evenings, accompanied by hot days, contributed greatly to fpread the infection; that in cafe of a yellow fever, it dangerous for those who have fled to return to their res till froft has fet in; and that a keen froft undoubtedly puts an almost inflantaneous termination to the progrefs of the diforder.

Having thus given an account of the tile, progrefs, and decline of the late fever, I thall next tay before my readers, two communications with which I have been politely favoured, with relpeft to its origin &c.

The first is from Deflor Samuel L. Mitchell, Projector of Natural History, Agriculture, and Chemistry in Commubia College, a gentleman whole literary talents are not only celebrated in America, but likewife in every part of civilized Europe. His opinion is contained in a letter addreffed to me, in answer to one which I had written to him on the agd of November laft, and is as follows.—

Naw-Taxe, November 24. creft.

Sis,

IN your letter of yefterday, you requelt me to fumilia you with fuch hints as may occur to me concerning the origin of the diffemper, which, during the laft three months, has afflicted the city of New-York. I with pleafure communicate to you on this point, fuch general idear, as mflant recollection fupplies me with. The great difforte which divides the citizens of the United States, whether this diftemper is produced at home, or introduced from abroad, appears to me to be more of a fpeculative than of a practical nature. The experience of the inhabitants of ancient Rome, London, and indeed of moli large and populous cities in Europe and Afia, have in the progrels of their fettlement, fuffered excellively from mortal epedemics, Balsorah has more than once been nearly depopulated, and other great cities of the eaflern world, have from time to time, experienced a fimilar difaller. It is fufficiently evident to me that the production and continuance of these plagues are owing to an imperfed and wretched police ; and I judge to because in all fituations naturally healthy, where lickness of that kind has prevailed, it has been in all cafes mitigated, and in many almost entirely prevented, by the adoption of proper local regulations. I think the experience of mankind is deciliare on this point.

AN ACCOUNT OF THE

New-York, and fome other cities and towns of North America, are beginning to fuffer what other cities and towns in ancient and modern times have undergone before them. In this country we have as yet loft only our thoufands, but in Furope and Afia, they have loft their tens of thoufands, and hundreds of thoufands. A fate as fevere as theirs awaits us, if we refufe to profit by their experience. It is wifer and better to undertake reformation at once, than by twaiting fifty, or an hundred, or five hundred years, with fuch decay of induftry and deftruction of life, as has been lately our lot, and after all be compelled to execute at laft, that which is both our intereft and our duty to perform without a moments delay.

I confider cleanlines in our perfons, clothing and habitations, to be a matter of moral obligation; and the punifhment which providence has wifely thought proper to inflict upon those who violate this law is fickness, not unfrequently terminating in yellow-fever, pestilence and plague.

There is a vulgar faying which I have often heard " never mind it, one's own nastiness is fweet." It is certain that individuals endure patiently or even without adverting to it, more of their own dirt than of other peoples' Mankind in almost all places appear to have acted for a long time under the influence of this pernicious error; and accordingly when diffempers have broken out in confequence of their own careleffnefs and indiferetion, they have been fond of laying the blame on others. Hence it has been afferted with the utmost politiveness that the yellow-fever has been imported from the Weft-Indies, and plague from the Levant, while at the very time thefe affertions are fo confidently made by fome among us, the fact of local origin in those very places and countries is flatly denied by the people who dwell there. They like our own countrymen " think their own naftinefs fweet." and cannot be perfuaded it has any thing unbealthy or noxious in it.

But let us be candid and examine the fubject fairly : If an army of ten thousand or any other number of men is encamped long in one fpot of ground, it often happens that fevers and dyfenteries break out among the foldiers ; the number of men fit for parade hourly diminishes, and the Hofpitals are crouded with the fick. There can be no queftion that in fuch cafes the caufes of those diffempers are engendered there. Every prudent general knows the way to ftop the ravages of the discafe is to quit the infected spot, and encamp upon a new and sresh piece of ground. And this ought always to be attended to in campaigns, where the nature of the fervice will permit. In this cafe the men move away and leave the nuisances behind.

What now is a modern city but a vaft encampment? Are not the fame caufes of difeafe, daily and hourly accumulating? Ought it to be a matter of furprize, that during a moift and hot feafon venom fhould be produced, rife into the air, and render it too foul and poifonous to fupport life? If it was possible to abandon the contaminated place, and change our ground, as a general changes his camp, the inhabitants of cities would escape difeases as well provided armies do. But fcats of commerce, trade and manufacture, are defined to be the perpetual refidence of perfons engaged in certain kinds of bufinels, who cannot, without irreparable lofs and ruin, quit their improvements. and occupations. There is a necessity, therefore, a they cannot move away from their nuifances, THAT THEIR NUISANCES SHOULD BE MOVED AWAY FROM THEM. Both common fense and common decency demand the performance of this.

To be a little more particular : If my information is correct, the exhalations from privies and finks in many parts of this city, have become not only intolerably offenfive, but actually peftilential, and the caufe of difeafe. The vapours iffuing from barrels of putrifying beef have poifoned a number of our citizens. Many flores, yards and cellars abound with fubftances equally detrimental to health; and in addition to this, it deferves to be mentioned that human carcafes, buried and accumulated for a long ferics of years, have poifoned the air in many parts of chriftendom, and that by the concurrence of both municipal and fpiritual authority, the practice of interring in cities and church-yards, has been abfolutely prohibited in many parts of Italy, on account of the horrid mitchiefs occationed thereby. Although the evil has not grown to fuch an alarming height among ourfelves at this day, yeth is certainly worthy of confideration, whether it would not be better at once for christians to difcard the fuperfittion which leads to this practice, and imitate the Jews and Mahometans in conveying their carrion entirely out of town and burying it in places remote from the habitations of the living. A regard for the prefervation of pofiction, as well as our own prefent and perfonal fecurity, inclusion us the adoption of fome decifive measures: upon this head.

So much for local origin in and about the habitations of on our flore. See next how the queffion flands with respect to importation. It is acknowledged, as has been observed, that cities, camps and houfes, may become peinstitute and unfafe to dwell in, by reafon of poifonous matter bred within them. Now, what is a fhip but a houfe a-float? Every fea-veffel is, properly fpeaking, a hour habitation. And in this houfe or habitation are imported which are known to produce peffilence on the land. Human beings, too often neglectful of cleanlinefs during health, and in times of cknefs frequently wallowing in their own filthinefs, are we tenants of thefe floating houfes; and they are fomeames furrouded by the fickening exhalations emitted from lamaged provisions, hides, coffee, and whatever elfe composes their cargo, rendered active by moisture, quickened by heat, and multiplied by being kept under hatches.

Of all the contrivances of art, a fhip feems the most completely calculated to concentre & work up to the highest degree of virulence, all manner of plague-producing things. The hiftory of expeditions both for war and commerce, by sea, furnishes abundant evidence of this truth. Importation then stands thus; the fickness of the crew may be caused by pestilential fluids, and these fluids are extricated from foul and corrupt fubftances on board the veffel, and is as much local in its origin THERE as in any place that can be pointed out in this or any other city. Further, I have it on the information of respectable masters of veffels, that in numberlefs inftanc the men fall fick ON BOARD, not only at fea, but in fer ign ports and harbours without ever having been on fl , or having connection with any perfon or thing that I come from the shore. And what adds to the concluss nefs of this statement is, that when the men get fick on board, the custom in a number of the West-India illands, is to fend them on fhore to recover their health.

If then, by IMPORTATION, is meant the taking on board the feeds of Yellow-Fever, and conveying them like grains of coffee or rice (for this is the language) from one region to another, the whole doctrine is indiffutably fallacious, being grounded on nothing better than a fuppoled analogy between things exceedingly different in nature from each other, and, on a mifreprefentation of lacts which has, alas ! too generally and too long been countenanced by phyficians and merchants of the light character.

My other engagements prevent my adding any more. The contents of this letter are written with my own hand; and if there was any body now with me to whom I might dictate, I could eafily add a few paragraphs on prevention. This, however, must make a part of a public report on that fubject, in which I am engaged, with feveral gentlemen of learning, experience, and refpectability. In the mean time, be affured, that no perfon withes greater fuccefs to your labours, for the good of our fellowcitizens, than

To Mr. James Hardie.

The fecond communication I received in a letter from Mr. Richardfon Underhill, a refpectable merchant of this city, on the 30th December, in anfwer to one which I had written to him, on the 23d of the fame month. This Gentleman is indeed no regular bred phylician; but as from motives of humanity, he had been very attentive to the diftreffes of the fick, during the calamity of the year 1795, and being a perfon of obfervation, he foon became acquainted with that mode of treatment; which was most conducive to their recovery. Upon the commencement of the fever of 1798, being again actuated by the most philanthropic principles, he embarked in the fame hazardous bufinefs, and was the happy means of mitigating the forrows of many of the afflicted. To thefe he not only preferibed; but alfo afflifted in adminiftering such meducines as were deemed proper. He likewife took care, that all those whom he faw in want, should by fome means or other he relieved. A couduct like his, is above eulogium. The poor and needy, whose wants were fupplied and whose difeases were cured by his means will no doubt think, as long as they live, of their benefactor with gratitude.

The communication with which Mr. Underhill, has favoured me, appears to me, to be intereffing and as I am convinced it will be confidered in the fame manner by moft of my readers, I shall lay it before them without further apology,

NEW-YORK, 18th Mo. 30th 1798.

ESTREMED FRIEND; JAMES HARDIE,

THY favor of the 23d, inft. I have the pleafure of acknowledging. In this thou aikeft my opinion, refpecting the origin of the diforder, to which fo many of our citizens have recently become victims; the method of cure purfued by me, and my opinion, what fhould be done by the proper authority, to prevent a return of this terrible pefilience.

In a mind, void of prejudice, it is more difficult, perhaps, to form an exact opinion of the origin of this diforder, than molt people, upon a transient view of the fubject, would suppose; for my own part, neither my educa. tion, nor my inclination, will permit me to form any theories, concerning the first engendering of pestilence, from combinations of gazes, or other caufes. The dens, in which it is bred, and in which it lurks, until it iffues forth to feize its prey, are more proper objects for perfons in my fphere of life to enquire out and explore. To this purpole I have frequently revolved in my mind, whether it was an imported or homebred diforder, feveral circumflances concurring to produce an opinion of its being the latter. The rapid progrefs of it, during one of the hoteft fummers we have ever experienced, just after a very heavy fall of rain, which ftagnated in almost an immumerable number of cellars and back yards ; the malignancy of it in the neighbourhood of fome of those cellars, many of them stowed with large quantities of putrid beef; in the neighbourhood of filthy fewers, or other nuifances, and, alfo, from its fpreading on Golden-hill and Cliff-street, which are in a northerly direction from fome of those dens of peftilence I have just mentioned, and of course liable to be acted upon by the prevailing fouth winds. But however well founded this opinion may be, with refpect to the agency of those things, in producing the disease, yet with all these, other facts, which I will relate, has almost induced me to believe, that all is not to be charged to them. They rendered the neighbourhood highly combultible, but perhaps a fpark of contagion might be neceffary to produce fo dreadful a conflagration. The first appearance of the diforder was in Front-street, near Coenties-slip, where Mclancton Smith died, about the 28th, or 29th of July, and on the 30th Peter A. Schenk was taken feverely lick. The following week, one Wilfon, M. Smith. jun. Peter Duftan and wife, and A Adriance, had flight attacks, from whence it fpread to other families in a very fhort time. *

The next appearance of the fever was at the houle of Henry Mead, at the lower corner on the weft fide of the New-flip. Some time in July, the fhip Fame, faid to have arrived from fome one of the Wesl-India islands. came to the wharf next below the New-flip, and lay there fome time. About the 3d or 4th of August, some people went to discharging the ballast and pumping her out; among the ballast was a quantity of damaged coffee, extremely putrid, which, with the water discharged from the pump, was fo offenfive to the fmell, that the neighbours were induced to that their windows, efpecially while eating. About the 6th of faid month, the following perfons fpent a confiderable part of the day at Mead's houfe, John Taylor, Ebenezer Taylor, Sylvanus Seaman, Monmouth Hubbs, Walter Davis, Augustus Peck, and a young man, clerk in a ftore near the exchange: Moft of these

^{*} The people of this neighbourhood laid the blame of their fickness to the fchooner Fox, which arrived from Jercmie between the middle and latter part of July, and hawled to a wharf a little east of Coenties-flip, where the anloaded, and upon pumping her out, her bilge-water was very offensive; but I think the filth to be observed in this part of the town, quite as likely to give them fever as bilge-water and molasses.

and more, and during their dinner, mey were under the necessity of feuturing up their doors and windows, though the weather was very warm, fo exceedingly were they annoved by the flench from the fhip. Of this company. collected from feveral quarters, and who difperfed to their respective homes, not a fingle one escaped severe licknels, which they were taken with in from 4 to 5 days, and of which John and Ebenezer Taylor died. Two perfons belonging to the family were also fick. The next house above this, (there being none below it) was at the fame time vifited, and of 5 perions, three were taken dangeroufly ill and 2 died : In the fecond house above, 3 more perfonswere fick at the fame time, and 1 died; and the family of the housenext to this, thared a fimilar fate, 3 were lick, two of whom died in a very fnort time. Many of the boatmen, whole veffels lay in the flip at this period, fared no better, a number of them being vistims to this stench, or the contagion it produced. On the east fide of the flip, the inhabitants at this time were as healthy as ufual for the feation; but in the neighbourhood northerly, the diforder fpread with great rapidity; fcarcely a family cleaped levere fickness for some distance in that direction : it is to be observed that the wind was wholly foutherly .---Nathaniel Clark, who lives in Cherry-ftreet, in this neighbourhood, was on the wharf where this fhip lay, and went home to his family, complained much of the ftench he had finelt there, and in 3 or 4 days was taken with the fover, which he had feverely : Several of his family fickened fhortly after. From these facts it appears that the ficknels in this quarter was caufed by the fhip; whether it was created in her, or brought from another country, I cannot undertake to determine; but be it as it may, the fever was undoubtedly there contagious; and fpread to diffant parts of the town by means of the fick; the bodies of the inhabitants having (as I suppose) been rendered ripe for its re-From here I can trace it to the neighbourhood ception. of Golden-hill, where a man named Harper, died in Goldfirect on the 11th of August. One Fowler died the 18th of fame month in John-freet; and the 3d victim was Solomon Carl, who died on the 20th, in Gold-ftreet. Harper imputed the origin of his fickness to his having croffed the dock of the flip beforementioned three days before he was taken; a refpectable merchant was with him, who has fince told me they were offended with a very difagreeable fmell. Solomon Carl was at the funeral of a woman named Jones, who had died in the neighbourhood of the New-Slip, about 3 days before he fickened himfelf.

The methods I purfued to cure the diforder were generally very fimple, fuch as were dictated by nature, and a fmall fhare of experience I had in the year 1795. I endeavoured always to purge the patient, bring on a gentle perfpiration and continue it, which treatment of itfelf I may fay cured hundreds; the medicines I felected to bring about those ends, were fuch as I deemed mildelt and most efficacious in their operation : for the first purpose I ufed caftor oil, and for the other, warm teas of cat-nip or balm; In obstinate cases, or cases attended with delirium, I used hot applications of ashes, bricks, &c. wet with vinegar and fpirits, and if I could raife a perfpiration a cure generally enfued, particularly among middle aged perfons of good conftitutions. Those were the methods most ulcd, tho' I found it necessary to vary and use other means at times, according to the conflitution of the patient, or flage of the difease, when I first began my prescriptions.

My opinion concerning what is neceffary to prevent a return of this diforder is formed from the facts I have before related. I think it neceffary to abfolutely prohibit ftagnant waters and to compel those perfons who have wet cellars, to keep them conftantly pumped out and cleaned; to fill up the docks and flips, if not entirely, at leaft fuch parts of them as are too far from running water, or are expoled to the fun at low-water ; to prevent provisions from being ftored at all in town, during certain feasons of the year. Altho' this may be thought a great inconvenience, yet let it be remembered that the health of the whole ought not to be rifqued for the convenience of many, much lefs for . a few; at all events provisions ought to be kept out of damp cellars in hot weather, for when they are not abfolutely fpoiled, their pickle fometimes fmells very offenfive, and I judge all air to be noxious that offends my note, at least, I know of no rule of judging which admits of fewer exceptions; to fill up the common fewers where practicable and let the filth which they are intended to hide appear to the eye in all its deformity, which will

I alfo think (from convertations I have had with feveral judicious perfons upon the fubject) that it would be proper to introduce the ufe of coal altogether as fuel in the low parts of the city, where the ground has been made wholly, or in part by covering marthes and floughs, with a few feet of harder earth; The method to be fallen upon to caufe coal to be generally uled in those fituations, would perhaps require much confideration, by those whose province it is to confider on it; but I am inclined to believe, if it fhould be found upon due enquiry to be neceffary, the general good fenfe of the people would lead them to adopt it without compulii-If to all thefe regulations, it were pollible to add the falubrious influence of a ftream of fresh water, cleanling the furface of our freets, I think this city may yet be bleffed with a good general flate of health.  I think at or near the Watering-place, on Staten-Ifland, would be a proper fituation for this purpole. The prevalence of the fever in New-York, is accounted for as follows, in the Philadelphia Gazette of the 4th inft. under the New-York head :

" FEVER.

A very confiderable alarm having taken place among the citizens, and the most exaggerated reports circulated about the country, of the fickness with which certain parts of the city are afflicted, we have thought it a duty to make fuch enquiries as might enable us to place the matter in a point of view, as near the truth as possible.

"About the beginning of August, in confequence of the foul, unfinished state of feveral water-lots, on the East river, between Coenties and the Old-stip, upwards of 20 perfons were attacked nearly about the fame time, with what appeared to be common colds, fome stightly, others more feverely; but the general occurrence of the fact in that neighdourhood, led to a belief that it arose from a local cause, and threatened fomething more ferious. The foulness of the lots, and especially two vacant ones, being receptacles of every kind of filth, was considered as that cause; and in pursuance of official arrangements, they were immediately covered with wholesome fand : The effect was, a general restoration of the fick.

In the neighbourhood of the New-flip, where the buildings for the molt part are finall, and many of them inhabited by poor people, who live in a crouded manner, and in fituations incapable of proper ventilation, difeafes occurred about the 12th—a number of perfons died—but at prefent there appears to be no great caufe of alarm in that quarter.

"About the fame period, or a little later, two or three perfons were feized at Bruce's wharf, with fufpicious fymptoms, and fome deaths have taken place there and in its vicinity, owing, it is generally thought, to the extremely foul condition of Bruce and Marfton's unfilled lots, bounding on the Eaft-river, at the foot of Pine-ftreet the effluvia iffuing from them being highly putrid and offentive. Measures have been taken, and are now in operation, to cover them with wholefome earth, by which means it is hoped the evil in that quarter, if it has arifen from this fource, may be corrected.

" About the 20th, feveral perfons were feized in Cliffflicet, nearly in the fame manner as those between Coen. tics-flip and the Old-flip. At first they generally confidered their complaints to be mere colds taken by fleeping with open windows in the violent hot weather which then prevailed-Unfortunately, it was a more ferious cafe. The patients rapidly grew worfe, and feveral died as well there as in John, Gold and Rider-ftreets, and Eden's-Allies, all lying within the vicinity of Burling-flip fewer. These complaints, on investigation, were thought to proceed, in part, from the offenfive state of that fewer : which had, for fome time, become a receptacle for various species of putrid matter, and of which the mouth lies nearly oppofite John-ftreet, commonly called Golden-hill Arcet-fo that whenever a South or S. E. wind prevailed, it blew through the fewer, and bore a column of effluvia up John ftreet, and through that into Cliff and the adjacent flreets, rendering the atmosphere intolerably bad. The belt informed phyficians are of this opinion. The head of the fewer has fince been closed by a valve-door, and a confiderable quantity of quick-lime thrown into it, with a view of neutralizing its contents. A fimilar door, with the fame intention, has been added to the Ferryflueet fewer.

" Other caufes are alfo alledged, and with great plau. fibility, at leaff, if not certainty.

" It is well known that the collation of our commercial intercourfe with the French illands, in confequence of their hoffile violence, has greatly leffened the demand for provisions; of courfe large quantities of beef remained in many cellars, particularly among the merchants of Much of this, from what is now feen to be Pearl flreet. an improper mode of packing, as directed by a late law, has lately become tainted, emitted a very putrid effluvium- corrupting the air and contributing its fhare as a caufe of difeafe. We learn that the committioners of the health office have taken meafures to have it all infpected, and the fpoiled removed out of town. Much already has been lent away, and the remainder is going as faft as poffible.

"These causes, with the immense fall of rain, and vient heats, experienced in the course of August, are supposed to have originated the disease which has spread such panic as to drive many families into the country.

"On the most diligent enquiry, however, we cannot find out, that any great subject of alarm exists, except in the neighbourhood of the New-slip----in the vicinity of Burling-slip-fewer----and at the foot of Pane-street, at which places several persons have died.

" Individual caies have allo occurred in other parts of the town, but, as in 1995, they remain influented, and without communication to the attendants, as far as we can difeover. Thefe, it is generally thought, were taken at one or the other places before mentioned.

"An opinion has been avowed by forme, that the difeafe has been imported, or arofe from damaged coffee, thrown out of a fhip on Kelly's dock, weft of the Newslip. This, in the prefent instance, is utterly groundlefs, and can ferve no purpose but that of delusion. The quantity of refuse coffee, alluded to by our advocates for imported contagion, did not exceed half a peck, and was the mere fweepings of the hold.

"We are informed by a gentleman who has been at the pains to collect a lift of the perfons interred in the feveral burial grounds, that during the laft week they averaged about 12 per day—and that previous to Sunday laft, there was no very unufual mortality for the feafon.

"With respect to new cases, enquiry at the best fources, enables us to fay they have very much declined within the last 24 hours, and that the difease yields more readily to medicine.

"How far this flatement authorizes the extreme alarm which precipitates for many citizens out of town, we do not know; but it would at leaft be advifeable that all who remove fhould leave their houses, cellars and yards in a cleanly condition—that fuch as remain may not be exposed to the bad effects of their careless and indifcretion.

"The fyshem of cleanlines adopted by the commissioners of the health office, we are happy to observe, is purfued with encreased vigour; and indefatigable efforts are daily made by that board, to preclude every source of suppure air in the city.

"This flatement may be depended on -- it is the refult of enquiry of the first authority." To these opinions I shall add another, which my readers, will no doubt, consider as being very respectable; I mean that of our Health-Officer, Doctor Bayley. I have extracted what follows from a late very interesting publication of his, entitled, "Letters from the Health-Office to the Common Council."

To the Common Council of the City of New-York.

HEALTH-OFFICE, December 4, 1798.

Gentlemen,

IN addition to the facts which are contained in the correfpondence between the Health Conmissioners and the Common Council for the year 1798, I shall offer to your confideration a few remarks upon the origin and progrefs of the pestilential difease which has lately prevailed in this city; and in order to corroborate what I may advance, I shall, in the first place take a retrospect of events which have annually taken place in this city, during the warm months fince the year 1795.

According to the records of the Health-Office, the yellow fever appeared in 1796 at White-hall, at the foot of Pine-ftreet, at Burling-flip, and in the neighbourhood of Roofevelt-ftreet fewer.

In 1797 between Coenties and the Old flip, in Frontftreet, at the Fly-market in feveral inftances, in Fletcherftreet, at Burling-flip, in Water-ftreet, adjoining Roofevelt-ftreet fewer, in George-ftreet, and at the foot of Pineftreet.

In 1798 the difeafe first appeared about midway between Coenties and the Old-slip, in Front-street, between the 1st and 7th of August. On the 7th of August about twenty-three were reported fick to the Health-Office. From that period feveral others fickened, and of the whole number one died. By the 26th of August, the complaint had disappeared in that quarter in confequence of the measures taken to remove the cause, by covering the offensive lots with clean, wholesome earth.

On the 12th of August, it appeared at No. 283, Waterreet, in the case of Mr. Taylor, in an old broken building, on an unfinished lot at the foot of Dover-fireet, in which 11 perfons died early in 1795, and which has fince been repeatedly represented as a nuisance.

August 12, alfo, the difease appeared in the case of John Henderson, corner of James-street, and Batavia-lane. On all fides of his residence, which was a small crowded building, there were such that an unfinished state.

Again, on August 12, the difease appeared in William Whitlock, Card-maker, No. 51, Cherry-street. In the rear and to the south of his residence, the lots are very generally below the level of the streets, and without drains.

August 13. Murdock M'Lean, Bruce's wharf, was feized, where the difease has regularly made its appearance every warm feason fince the year 1795.

The first arrival of fick in this harbour, (to the knowledge of the Health-Office) from Philadelphia, was on the 13th of August, in the New-York and Philadelphia Packet. The Captain died on the passage—the mate was fick and was fent to Bellevue.

From the preceeding flatement, the yellow-fever made its appearance in different parts of the city on the fame day, and in the courfe of fix or eight days, in different flreets, remote from one another.

On the 8th August the mercury in Farenheit's Thermometer, at an elevation of 40 feet above the ground, and in the shade, at two P. M. stood at 01 degrees.

The fudden and great increase of heat immediately after the violent rain, appeared to have a proportionately influence in producing fever. Between that period and the and August, upwards of twenty perfons in Cliff-ftreet, were feized with flight indispositions, which they attributed to fleeping with open windows during the preceding hot and most weather, but which appeared rather as the forerunner of yellow fever, for, not only the perfons thus indisposed, but a number of others in the fame ftreet, had that diffede in the course of a few days.

From this period the difeafe became more general; but its fatality val principally felt in Cliff-firect and its neighbourhood, at Catherine flip, in Water-firect and on the unfinitied groupes in the fouthern part of the city.

Loss having four that the yellow fever had made its appearance in New York every year, for feveral years paft, but has prevailed in very different degrees, it becomes a matter of great in particulation the low new made grounds in 1795, whill never bearedy felt in the more clevated fituations; why in reach, and reach, its appearance was limited to particular fuence, and why, in 1998 it not only prevailed on all the new-made grounds, but also in parts of the city which had before been exempted from the dilease.

To answer these questions in such a manner, as to prove fatisfactory to every one, might be a very difficult task. I shall, however, offer fome reasons which may tend to shew why the fever was more prevalent this year, than in the preceding years.

It is well alcertained that in the year 1795, there was an unufual degree of heat and moilture in the atmosphereduring the warmer months—that the Thermometer was confiderably higher than in 1796 and 1797, but that in 1798, the heat greatly exceeded that of 1795.

Now, as heat and moilture are powerful agents in producing pedilential difeases, fo must the same caules neceffarily promote the extension of those difeases.

In the year '98, there were belides, local caufes of fever in this city, which did not exift in the other feafons, and which, co-operating with the weather, ferved to extend the difeafe beyond the limits, to which it would probably have, been otherwife confined. I have reference to the immenfequantities of fpoiled beef, fifth, and other articles of a perifhable nature, which were flored in different parts of this city. The noxious exhalations arifing from thefe fources, in my apprehention, was a great caufe why the difeafe arole and raged with great violence in particular fituations: And when we confider the fudden appearance of the fever at Golden-hill and in Cliff-flreet, and the great number which fickened nearly at the fame time, there is great reafon to believe this opinion well founded.

About the 20th of August, a report was made to the Health Office, that great quantities of fpoiled beef were flored in Pearl-flreet, between Burling and Beekman-flips. The flench which iffued from fome of the cellars in this fituation, was fo confiderable, as to prove very offensive to those who passed by, and became a subject of general obfervation. Letters, in confequence, from the Health-Office, were addressed to owners of provisions in that quarter, enjoining them to have the beef examined, and to have such as was spoiled, fent out of the city. Instead, however, of adopting this plan, the beef was brought from the cellars into the fireet, the barrels opened, and the putrid pickle thrown into the gutters. In fome inftances the examination was made in the cellars, and the pickle difpored of in the fame manner. The gutters which conveyed away this putrid pickle, led to Bnrling-flip fewer.

The relative fituation of this fewer, and Cliff-ftreet is fuch that the foutherly and fouth-eafterly winds, force 'a current of air through the fewer, carrying with it the exhalations arifing from the noxious matter collected together in that place, and having a direction to pafs more immediately up Golden-hill, and into Cliff-ftreet; and every perfon in that neighbourhood with whom I have converfed, agrees as to the offenfive fmell of the air, previous to the appearance of the fever.

On the 20th of August, the wind, which had been blowing from the north and west fome days previous, shifted to the fouth-east, and continued to blow from that quarter fome time. In 48 hours after this, there was fearcely a house in Pearl-street, near where the spoiled provisions were stored, in the lower end of John-street, and in Cliffstreet, which did not contain fick.

The fudden appearance of fever in this part of the city, and the great number which were in fo fhort a time affected, proves the local nature of the caufe; and to the one which I have just mentioned, I have no hefitation, in afcribing all the effects which were experienced.

If what we have alledged, be admitted fufficient to explain the appearance of fever which took place in Cliffftreet, &c. we have made fome advances towards accounting for the general prevalence of the difeafe in 1798.*

But, gentlemen, we have further to remark a particular difference in the warm feasons of 1798 and 1795.

In 1795 the weather was warm and moift, but there was but very little rain.

In 1798 the weather was not only much warmer, but was accompanied by fudden and heavy rains.

Immediately after the rains the public papers teemed with addreffes to the citizens, entreating them to empty their cellars of the water which had collected in them, or the most fatal effects would be felt from neglect, or inattention to this circumstance. It is not my intention to dispute the opinion advanced by these writers. But, if the production of difeafe, was to be apprehended from the lodgment of water in places where the fun's rays flever en_x ter, what effects were to be expected from the ponding of water in those numerous lots and yards within this city, which are feveral feet below the level of the ftreets, containing dead animal and vegetable matters, and to which the rays of the fun have full accels ? I wilh you, gentlemen, to reflect ferioully upon this comparison, and believe, that whilft those funken, undrained lots are fuffered to remain in their prefent state, unless causes cease to produce their effects, difeafes must inevitably refult.

On examining the records of the legislature of this state. it will be found, that petitions have been preferred to that body, for permiffion to erect mill-dams on certain freams of water in fome of the northern counties, and the prayer of the petitioners has been granted. The confequence was, that confiderable tracts of low grounds in the neighhood of the mill-dams, were overflowed in the fpring, and after the water had paffed off, and the furface of those grounds were exposed to the influence of the fun, exhalations of so baneful a nature arose, as to produce a fever of a bilious type, which attacked almost every body within a certain diffance from their fource, and proved very mortal in its effects. The caule of this fickness being for obvious, petitions were prefented to the legiflature, prav. ing for a redrefs of the grievances. To correct the evil, it of course was necessary to destroy the mill dams, and as foon as the waters were unobstructed, and allowed to flow in their usual channel, the country became as healthy as before.

Permit me, gentlemen, to alk the following quellions: If the refult of exhalations arifing from grounds which have been covered with water in an open country, has been the production of billious remitting fevers, attended with confiderable mortality, what refult ought we to expect from those exhalations which arife from the ponding of water on 150 acres of low grounds and funken yards and lots in a crouded city, and of a fouthern afpect?

Before I conclude, I thall take the liberty of noticing fome of the public measures that have been adopted for the removal of causes of difease in this city. I shall confine myself to two principal objects : First. The want of a fufficient defcent on the low ground along the east-river, to carry off the waters from the ftreets, is generally admitted. A confiderable quantity of water must necessarily flagnate in the gutters of these ftreets, and also in the funken pavement. In dry weather this lodgement confifts principally of water which has been used for culinary and other family purposes, and must therefore, be supposed to abound with matters to afford noxious exhalations.

By an ordinance of the Corporation for cleaning the ftreets, the inhabitants are directed to fcrape out the dirt and filth collected in the gutters, and heap them up in the ftreets, to be removed by the fcavengers in the course of the day.

Now, does this regulation in any degree fuble are the purposes for which it was ordained? Does not the threading of this dirt and filth, and exposing new models of the furfaces, increase the milekief which the comparation of the tended to correct? I believe, gentleman, the comparation of found no other means to rid the low grounds of the y, from the baneful effects of flagnant waters, and approximmulation of noxious matters, than their being freely waihed by currents of water flowing over them.

Second. In the fame ordinance, the citizens are prohibited from throwing into the ftreets, from their respective houses, cellars, or yards, any dirt, filth, or offals whatever, except on certain days. How will this be found to operate in removing the causes of disease? Should we not rather ask, how this will be found to operate in increasing the causes of disease? One moment's reflection, I prefume, will convince us that fome means ought to be adopted to remedy a fystem fo fraught with mischief, and for these means I take the liberty of referring you to letter 70, addreffed by the Commissioners of the Health Office to the Common Council.

> I have the honor to be, Gentlemen, Your most obedient and Humble fervant, > > R. BAYLEY, Health-Officer.

From the preceding flatements, it will appear to my readers, that the caufe of the origin of this diforder, is fluid a r of queffion amongfl the learned; and that it is fully decided, whether the calamity, with which the of the United States have within these few years been as the Wy afflicted, has been imported, or that it is entry that the own country. Several reafons, however, whether are to incline to the latter opinion.

 $f_{i}(j)$. We are invated in the fame latitude with those places of the old world, where peftilential diforders annually predominate. With those places we are alike exposed during the fummer months to the united effects of heat and moifture, and from fimilar caufes fimilar effects may be always expected.

Secondly. The fever with which we were lately afflicted, although its first appearance was at one particular spot, viz. Coenties-flip, yet it was soon afterwards seen in so many different parts of the city, and so far remote from one another, that it is by no means probable that the contagion could be communicated so specified that the contagion was imported, it would seem to use, that there must have been at least seven or eight different fources of infection, or it could not have appeared in every direction from the source to the battery, almost about the fame time.

Thirdly. As a proof that this fever may be engendered in our climate, it may be added that it had at different times made its appearance in the vicinity of low marfhy grounds both in this and the neighbouring flates. (See Webster's Collection of Papers on the fubject of Bilious Fevers prevalent in the United States for a few years past) and that it appeared in the flate of New-Jersey during the last autumn, is pretty evident from the two following extracts of letters from two eminent physicians in that flate :

Extract of a letter from Dr. Jonathan Elmer, of Bridgetown, New-Jerfey, to a Phyfician in Philadelphia, dated December 6.

"From many facts I am induced to believe (tho' very reluctantly) that there were cafes of the yellow-fever in this place during the last autumn, which originated on the fpot, and that its propagation was occasioned, or at least promoted, by local infeliion, or generated in the place of its origination."

Extract of a letter from Dr. Lutamis, of Weeslaury, asted Dec. 4 is a Phylician in Philadelphia.

" During the late autumn, in the months of September and October, I vifited feveral perfons affected with the bilious yellow-fever, who had no poffible or portunity of · deriving their difeafe from any foreign fource. Knowing that this difeafe might have been of domestic crizin, and probably introduced among them from the city of Philadelphia, I was exceedingly particular in my encuiries on this point, and being fatisfied from the reitimony of the perfonsattacked, and of the families in which they refided, of their not having any communication with the city of Philadelphia for a long time previous to their functing with the difeafe; and of their having avoided, in the molt careful manner, all intercourfe with families affected with the yellow fever in their own neighbourhood. I have no hefitation in beheving their difeafe to have been the offspring of local caufes. The Majority of these cates have occurred in families living on farms intuated on the Jerfey The most valuable part of these fhore of the Delaware. farms confift of meadow; the proximity of these fituations to the Delaware, and large tracts of meadow land lead me to afcribe their difeafe (aided by a peculiar flate o: the air) to the exhalations or marth effluvia, ariting from the low grounds fituated near the banks, and the meadows in the vicinity of the Delaware. The peculiar disposition of these exhalations to produce difease and death, was evinced early in the feafon by the mortality which prevailed among the fowls and cats in this neighbourhood. I am not alone in having feen cafes of yellow-fever which -cannot be traced to contagion. Similar facts have been witneffed this feafon by other Phyficians, in various parts of New-Jerfey."

I have already observed that our climate being the fame with those places in the old world, which are annually exposed to pestilential diforders, we cannot expect to be entirely exempt from them. But at the fame time I am fully perfuaded, that if we make use of those means, which Divine Providence has put in our power, we have 'ittle to apprehend, on the fcore of their return or spreading in this country. In Turkey where peftilential diforders are exceedingly prevalent, fuch is the indolence of the inhabitants that little or no attempts are made to prevent their return or to ftop their ravages : for to use the words of Mr. John Payne, in his excellent fystem of Gcography, now publishing in this city, by John Low, Bookfeller, at the Shakelpeare's Head, No. 332 Waterftreet, " The doctrine of predefination and full more the barbarism of the government have hitherto prevented the Turks from attempting to guard against this destructive diforder, (meaning the plague) : the fuccels however, of the precautions taken by the Franks, has of late began to make some impressions upon many of them. The Christians of the country, who trade with European nations, would be disposed to fhut themselves up-like them ; but this they cannot do without the authority of the It feems indeed, as if the Divan would at laft pay Porte. fome attention to this object, if it be true that an edict was iffued in 1783, for the establishment of a Lazaretto at Conftantinople and three others at Smyrna, Candia, and Alexandria. The government of Tunis ado ted this wife measure some years ago; but the Turkish olice is every where fo wretched, that little fuccess can, h: hoped from these establishments notwithstanding then extreme importance and the fafety of the Mediterranean flates."

The above is the flate of peftilential diforders amongft them ; but furely with us it is widely different. Manv of our citizens, indeed, believe in the dostrine of predeftination as well as the Turks ; but at the fame time, almost every individual in cafe of any calamity, thinks it his duty to make use of those means which Providence has put in his power, to avert it. Our police is likewife, by no means, wretched. Our magistrates, to whom the health of our citizens is confided, are men of intelligence, and when the fources from which peftilence arife in our cities is better underflood, which from the measures lately taken, we may foon expect, there is little doubt, that our cities shall in a short time be either wholly exempt from, or at least partially visited by the direful calamity of the yellowfever.

To prevent its return has not only been an object of defirous enquiry with the magistrates of different cities, but also with our national government; for the Prefident of the United States, in his speech on the opening of the last selfior of Congress, thus addressed himself to the Senate and House of Representatives :---

" While with reverence and refignation we contemplate the difpenfations of Divine Providence, in the alarming and deftructive peftilence with which feveral of our cities and towns have been vifited, there is caufe for gratitude and mutual congratulations, that the malady has difappeared, and that we are again permitted to affemble in fafety, at the feat of government, for the discharge of our important duties. But when we reflect, that this fatal diforder has, within a few years made repeated ravages in fome of our principal feaports, and with increased malignancy, and when we confider the magnitude of the evils arifing from the interruption of public and private businels, whereby the national interests are deeply affected ; I think it my duty to invite the legislature of the union to examine the expediency of establishing fuicable regulations in aid of the health laws of the refpective states; for thefe being formed on the idea that contagious ficknefs may be communicated throughout the channels of commerce, there feems to be a neceffity, that Congress who alone can regulate trade, should frame a system which, while it may tend to preferve the general health, may be. compatible with the interefts of commerce, and the fafety of the revenue."

The Governor of Pennfylvania, likewife in his addrefs to the legillature of that flate, recommends to their ferious confideration, fuch meafures as he believed moft likely to prevent a like vifitation as that of the autumns of 1793, 1797, and 1798; and I am happy to add, that the bufinefs will no doubt be taken up by the general government of the Union, as a committee was appointed to report on that part of the prefident's fpeech, which refpected this truly important fubject. To this I may add that the Common Council of New York, anxious to guard our city against the return of peftilence, addreffed the Medical Society, foon after the decline of the diforder requesting them to give their opinions with refpect to its origin, best method of prevention, &c. and that in confequence the fociety appointed a committee of their own body, confifting of Doctors Samuel L. Mitchell, James Tillary, and John B. Rodgers, to confider the matter, and to report accordingly. The literary talents of thefe gentlemen are well known, and their zeal and anxiety to prevent the fufferings of the diftreffed, will never be called in queftion. We may, therefore, fpeedily expect, from their united efforts, a publication, which will be read by most of our citizens with the greatest avidity; and which I have no doubt will be productive of the higheft utility.

The fituation of our fellow-citizens in Philadelphia, was not very different from thole of New-York. What, therefore, might be useful to prevent the return of the fever in one place, may be of equal utility in another. I shall, therefore, lay before my readers the opinion of the academy of medicine of Philadelphia, addreffed to the governor.

On the Origin and Means of preventing the return of the Yellow Fever.

SIR,

IN order to comply with your requeft to the academy of medicine, communicated by Dr. Samuel Duffield, the confulting phyfician of the port, refpecting the means, of preventing the return of the epidemic fever which has lately afflicted our city, the academy have conceived the hiftory of its origin, neceffarily connected with their anfwer.

We believe it was derived from the following fources :

1. The exhalations of the alleys, gutters, docks, and common fewers of the city; and from ftagnating water in its neighborhood.

2. The foul air difcharged with the ballaft of the fhip Deborah, and the cargo of the brig Mary: the former of which arrived from Hifpaniola on the 18th of July, and the latter on the 29th of the fame month. We reject the opinion of an imported human contagion in either of the above veffels. It has not been afferted that any perfon died of the yellow fever on board the Mary, during her voyage; and if it be faid, that feveral performs died on board the Deborah of that difeafe, on her paffage to this city, we cannot admit that they contaminated the timbers or contents of the fhip in fuch a manner, as to fpread the difeafe to perfons at feveral hundred feet diffance from the wharf at which fhe was moored. The improbability of this opinion will appear from two confiderations.

First—The difease is not contagious in the West Indies; and rarely, if ever fo, in the United States in hot weather, at which time only it makes its first appearance in our country. So general is this opinion, that fome physicians have unfortunately refered to admit the existence of the fever in its commencement in our city, only because it was not contagious.

Second—The difeafe was in no inflance propagated by those perfons who were supposed to have derived it from human contagion, adhering to the timbers and contents of the Deborah and Mary, and who died with it in parts of the city remote from the influence of the foul air of those veffels.

It is faid that the contagion of the yellow fever is not uniform in its effects, it ought, at leaft, to be admitted, that it acts with most certainty where it exists with most force; but a reverse of this took place in the supposed origin of our late fever, from imported contagion. We are the more determined in our opinion of the foul air of the Deborah and Mary being the cause of many cases of our fever, from similar cases of fever having been osten produced from similar causes, instances of which were mentioned in our letter to you last year.

In fupport of our opinion of the difeafe being deprived from the exhalations of our city before enumerated, we fhall mention the names of the following perfons, who had the fever before the arrival of the Deborah or Mary in our port, viz. Benjamin Jones, from Berger's court, June 2d Mary Wrigglefworth, near the corner of Walnut and Tenth ftreets, June 6th; Rebecca Trefted, in Front between Spruce and Union ftreets, June 1 tth; Eliza Curran, Fourth below South ftreet, 27th June; Mark Miller, Callowhill ftreet, and Molly Zeller, Race ftreet, July 2d; Mifs Byrne, Spruce, between Second and Third ftreets, July 11th; Mr. Vannoft, Shannon ftreet wharves, Joly 1th. We observed, moreover, and heard of a confiderable number of perfons who had the difeafe in the western parts of the city, and in Southwark and the Northern Liberties, who had not been exposed to contagion, not breathed the air in the neighbourhood of Water-fireet for many weeks, and in fome instances for feveral months before they were attacked by that fever.

In addition to the arguments in favour of the domeific fources of the fever that have been mentioned in our former letter, we shall add four more that we think cannot be refuted.

r. The atmosphere of our city, during the prevalence of the fever, produced lenfations of pain or fickness in many people who came into it from the country; the fame atmosphere became the cause of the disease and death in others who visited the city, and who carefully avoided lodging, or any intercourse with persons infected by the fever.

2. The difease prevailed in many inland towns of the United States, which had no intercourse with sea-port towns in which it was epidemic. Those towns were, in every instance we have heard of, fituated near to puttid fubstances, or flagnating water.

3. The difeale was rarely contagious, even when it terminated in death, when carried into the country, or into towns not exposed to putrid exhalations.

4. The general extinction of the difeafe by froft, clearly proves that it exifts chiefly in the atmosphere; and that it is not derived, in the first instance, from human contagion; for froft, it is well known, does not act in the autumnal months upon the bodies of the fick, nor upon their beds, cloathing, or any other supposed receptacle of contagion.

We wilh to direct the attention of our fellow-citizens to the hiftory of the caufes and remedies of peftilential difeafes in foreign countries : In the ages of medical fuperfittion, when those difeafes were believed to be imported, they nearly depopulated cities for many fucceflive years. Frequent and accumulated fuffering at last begat wildom. The caufes of peftilence were different to exist in all countries, and domeftic remedies were applied to remove them. The effect of this change in the opinion and conduct of the nations of Europe, has been the almost semeral extirpation of malignant fevers from their cities and fea-ports. We have many documents to prove that the recurrence of the yellow fever has been prevented in the cities of Europe by cleanlinefs. It formerly prevailed in Italy, Spain, France, Germany, Holland, and occafionally, in Britain and Ireland, under the names of putrid, malignant, and bilious fevers, alfo of the gall-ficknefs and of the black fever. The laft name was derived from the black voniting, which is fo often the fymptom of approaching death in billious fevers.

We are the more confirmed in the opinion we have delivered, that the yellow fever is a native difeafe of our country, by difcovering that the fame opinion is held by most of the physicians and citizens of our fister states. We lament the prevalence of an opinion, that the admiffion of truth upon this fubject, will injure the credit of our city. Truth, upon all fubjects, is ultimately friendly to general interest and happiness, while the remedies of the evils of error, are always of a partial and transitory nature. We conceive that the report of the existence of a nature fo fubtile as to elude the utmost force of the health-laws, and the greatest vigilance of health officers, will be much more injurious to our city, than a belief of its being derived from caufes which are obvious to our fenfes, and which by active exertions might be eafily and certainly removed, without oppreffing or injuring our commerce.

We fhall repeat, in this place, the means recommended by us in our former letter, with the addition of fome others for preventing a return of the difeafe.

1. "Removing all those matters from our streets, gutters, cellars, gardens, yards, stores, ponds, vaults, &c. which, by putrefaction in warm weather, afford the most frequent cause of the disease in this country. For this purpose, we recommend the appointment of a certain number of physicians, whose business it shall be to inspect all such places in the city, the northern-liberties, and Southwark, as contain any matters capable by putrefaction, of producing the disease, and to have them removed.

2. "We earneftly recommend the frequent washing of all impure parts of the city in warm and dry weather, by means of the pumps, until the water of the river Schuylkill can be made to wash all the streets of the city : a meafure which we conceive promifes to our citizens the molt durable exemption from billious fevers of all kinds, of domeftic origin.

3. "To guard against the frequent fource of yellow fever from the noxious air in the holds of veffels, we re-, commend the unlading fuch veffels as contain cargoes liable to putrefaction, and the difcharging the ballalt of all veffels at a diftance from the city, during the months of June, July, August, September, and October. To prevent the generation of noxious air in the holds of veffels, we conceive every veffel fhould be obliged by law to carry and use a ventilator, and we recommend, in a particular manner, the one lately invented by Mr. Benjamin Wyn-We believe this invention to be one of the most koop. important and useful that has been made in modern times, and that it is calculated to prevent not only the decay of fhips and cargoes, but a very frequent fource of peftilential difeafes of all kinds'in commercial cities."

4. The filling up, or cleaning the docks in fuch a manner, that no matters capable of putrefaction, fhall be exposed to the rays of the fun at low water.

5. The clofing the common fewers, fo as to admit water only, and the daily removal of the filth of the city, de flined to flow into them, by means of covered carts or waggons made for that purpofe.

6. The prevention of the filth of the city from being accumulated, and ftagnating in its neighbourhood.

7. The prohibition of allies and narrow freets in the future improvement of the city.

8. An alteration of the prefent health law, which, by detaining veffels with perifhable cargoes for ten days at the hofpital, in hot weather, is calculated to increafe the foul air in their holds; and we recommend alfo, that no veffel, owned by a citizen of Philadelphia, be permitted to leave or to enter our ports, that is not provided with a ventilator.

We shall conclude our letter by deprecating, in the most folemn manner. the continuance of a belief in the suppofed importation of our fever, an opinion which has led to the total negligence of the means of preventing its return; also by humbly hoping, that a merciful Providence may not correct our ignorance and prejudices by frequent returns of a calamity, which in five years fwept away ten thousand of our inhabitants, and which in a few years may, if not obviated by the only proper remedies, (under the influence of the prefent inflammatory confliction of the atmosphere) annihilate our city.

DESULTORY OBSERVATIONS and REFLECTIONS.

THE following observation made by Mr. Charles Holt, in his account of the yellow fever as it appeared at New-London, in the fall of 1798, is equally applicable to this and to every other city attacked with peftilence: "What firiking infrances of the transitorinels of life does fuch a difeafe afford ! We fee men exulting in the bloom of youth and prime of health and ftrength, in three or four fhort days numbered with the dead. Our gayeft companions, our lovelieft friends, in lefs than a week, are laid in the duft. When we are daily witneffing these fcenes around us, who can avoid reflecting often, and feelingly, that, his turn may be next ! yet the mind, when habituated to the most afflictive and extraordinary events, becomes hardened, and views them with unconcern and indifference. Difeafe, and death, the most dreadful accidents that can afflict the human frame, when made familiar to the fight, ceafe to infpire dread, and are ranked with the most common occurrences.

Upon the first appearance of the fever, many of our inhabitants had recourfe to fome fort of supposed preventatives against infection. Thus, fome chewed garlic, others simoaked tobacco, and others hoped to avoid the diforder by having recourse to finelling-bottles, handkerchiefs dipped in vinegar, camphor bags, &c. fo that few individuals could be feen in the fireets, without one or other of the fe applied to his nottrils. At laft, however, experience had proved, that thefe were inefficacious. A reliance on divine Providence fucceeded, and in the most terrible ftages of the diforder, the citizens difcovered the most decent fortirude, and the greatest relignation. These imaginary preventatives were therefore thrown adde.

It has often been faid, that temperance was the bet prefervative against infection. The observation, in gene-ral, is certainly just; but it may, and, during the late calamity has, been carried too far. For my part, from what has come under my own knowledge, I have no hefitation in afferting, that to perfons, who had been accustomed to live freely, nothing could be more dangerous, than to become remarkably abstemious upon the appearance of this dilorder. Perfons of the above defcription, thould in my opinion, have continued to live in their ufual manner; by which means, they would have been more likely to repel infection, or if infected, they would have more strength to refist the attack. But whilst I confider abstinence in such a situation, as being highly improper, a fate of intemperance is certainly more to, for were it neceffary, I could mention the names of feveral individuals, who, whilft in a flate of intoxication, were attacked with the fever, and in two days after, were tenants of the grave. The fate of fuch people might be pronounced almost with certainty; they were feized with fymptom of a peculiarly malignant nature, and their death feemed unavoidable.

Mr. Carey, in his account of the Yellow Fever in Philadelphia, in the year 1793, mentions fome diffreffing fcenes which took place, in that city, in confequence of fome women in labour, being greatly at a loss for want of affiftance. Difflculties of the fame fort, occurred in New York, during the ficknefs of 1798, but by no means in the fame degree. There were however feveral inflances of diffrefs, in this particular, of which I fhall one felect one. My wife was taken in labour on the soth Sept. about 9 in the evening. I applied to many Doctors and Midwives. Some were really fick ; fome pretended to be fo, and others candidly told me, that in confequence of the peftilence, which prevailed in my vicinity, they would on no account attend. At five in the enfuing morning, I applied to Mrs. Bunting, a midwife at Deans dock Greenwich Street, who immediately came with me. I would not have mentioned this circumstance; but that it afterwards came to my knowledge, that Mrs. Bunting, in cafes where the diforder raged with the utmost malignity, never helitated to attend any perfons in that fituation, and that too in many cafes where fhe must have been convinced, the would never receive any emolument. Such inftances of difinterefted philanthropy, ought not, in a publication of this fort to be omitted. They do honour to human nature.

No difeafe has, perhaps, on any previous occasion been more fatal to physicians, than that with which we were lately afflicted : for during its prevalence, exclusive of medical fludents, no lefs than fixteen phyficians have been fwept off, in discharging the perilous duties of their profession. These are Doctors Andrews, Brooks, D. Chickering, Dizgley, Peter Faugeres, John B. Hicks, John B. Jones, Melchen Caldwell, Lamb, Millegan, J. B. Scandella, Elihu H. Smith, Teller, Tredwell, Varick, and Young. As all these gentlemen fell facrifices to their endeavours to relieve the diffreffed, it might appear invidious, were I to point out those, who in my opinion were most useful and eminent in their profession. I fhall therefore only mention the cafe of J. B. Scandella, who, being a foreigner of diffinguished literary abilities, and poffeffed of the most philanthropic principles, along with the others, fell a facrifice to his humanity. This gentleman was a native of Venice, and defcended of one of the most noble families in that country. He was, however, more diffinguished by the spelndour of his talents, than by the nobility of his birth. A liberal curiofity had led him to this country, when he had just finished his researches, and was preparing to embark for Europe, when motives of humanity led him back to Philadelphia, in the height of the late Epidemic. From thence he returned in fix days, having previoufly contracted that fatal difeafe, of which he expired, after a flort, though very painful illnefs, in the bloom of his age, and the vigour of his faculties. The great attention which was paid to this unfortunate ftranger, by Dr. Elihu H. Smith, was likewife in all probability, the immediate caufe of his death.

It is very remarkable, that although, there were, during the time of this peftilence, about 800 people in the Alms Houfe, no more than 24 died in all, and of thefe, only 7 of the diforder. It is likewife certain that thefe 7, caught the piftemper in the city, and that, in no inflance, con agion was communicated from one to another in that building. This uncommon healthinefs in a place, where there were fo many people together, may, in all probability be attributed to its airy fituation, the fpacious of the rooms, the remarkable cleanlinefs infifted upon by the manager Mr. Dodge, and the liberal use of lime.

It has been remarked, that during the feveral vifitations of yellow fever, with which different cities of the United States have been afflicted, that more men than women -have died of the diforder, in the proportion in general of about fonr to three; but during the peftilence of laft autumn, in this city, the proportion of the men who were cut off was ftill greater; there being very nearly about two men for one woman. This difproportion, however, of the fatality to the two fexes, need not appear ftrange, when we confider that men, by the nature of their employment, are more exposed to infection than women. The man having occasion to buftle about from one place to another, whilft the woman's particular province is the fuperintendance of the family concerns.

This, however, may not appear to a number of my readers, when they find in my fill containing the number of perfons interred in each of the buryous grounds of this city, that I have only mentioned 41 marines. It ought therefore to be observed, that exclusive of thele 41 who were buried in what is callad the Negrue: Hneying Ground, there were no doube, for times that number buried in the Potter's field, at Belleyou, and in forms of the grave yards of this city.

Some extracts of letters from Philadelphia, publified in our newspapers in this city, announce, that there are thill feveral cates of yellow fever amongst them. There are allo reports to the same purpose with respect to its exsilence amongst us, Jan. 16th; but upon the most particular enquiry of a number of respectable Physicians, and others, I cannot find a single instance of its having been seen here for these feveral weeks pass: And I am almost convinced, that the situation of the Philadelphians is as healthy at prefent as ours.

The P O O R,

AND THE MANNER IN WHICH THEY WERE RELIEVED,

In the City, at Bellevue, and in the Debtors Appartment.

IN a calamity fo terrible and unexpected, the diffrefs of the labouring poor were unavoidably great. The general ftagnation of bulinefs had deprived them of their ordinary means of fupport and rendered them unable to remove where employment and fubliftence might be had. To add to their difficulties, their employers, and more affluent acquaintances, who might have been difpofed to relieve their wants, had in general fled.

But thefe were not the only objects of commiferation. Many, who had fupported themfelves and families in an eafy, though not alfluent manner, were from the impoflibility of earning any thing, the difficulty of recovering their little debts and the heavy expences incident to a flate of ficknefs, reduced to the most extreme diffrefs, whilft others, in opulent circumflances, having remained in the city, after their connexions had removed, being fuddenly feized with the prevailing diforder, were left helplefs by themfelves, without a friend to confole them, a phyfician to preferibe for them or a nurfe to administer the prefeription.

The Health Commissioners, appointed by authority of the State Legislature, had hitherto exerted their utmost endeavours to alleviate the various afflictions of the diftreffed, but the Common Council being informed that the number of fick had become fo great and were still encreasing, that the Commissioners could not take care of them all, that the accommodations at Bellevue were infufficient and that many of the poor fick were fo circumstanced as to render a removal there both inconvenient and improper, on the 10th September appointed Gabriel iurman, John B. Coles, Theophilus Beekman, Jacob de la Montagnie and Richard Furman, Effrs. five of the Aldermen, together with John Bogert and Philip I. Arcularius Efgrs. two Affistant Aldermen, a committee of their own board denominated the Health Committee of the City of

New-York, "with full powers to make fuch other buildings for the fick at Bellevue, as they, with the advice of the Commissioners of the Health-Office might think necelfary; and to take into their charge and furnish with medical aid, and every neceffary, all fuch of the fick poor as could not be accommodated at Bellevue, or the fituation of whose perfons or families were fuch as to render their removal to Bellevue improper or inconvenient."

The gentlemen fo appointed, totally difregarding their own prefervation, and only intent on arrefting the progrefs of the diforder and relieving the diffreffed, with a magnanimity and patriotifm meriting the higheft eulogiums, readily ftept forth and by their generous, ftedfaft and benevolent exertions, undoubtedly faved many of their fellow citizens from penury, difeafe and death. As foon as they accepted the appointment to this arduous undertaking, they immediately proceeded to bufinefs and appointed Alderman Gabriel Furman their chairman, a gentleman, who together with Alderman Beekman had been on the committee for the relief of the fick and indigent in the years 1793 and 1794, and alfo during the peftilential diforder of 1795. I have already obferved, that one of the objects for which the committee was appointed was to make fuch further buildings and accommodations for the fick at Bellevue as they with the advice of the Commissioners of the Health-Office might think neceffary. They accordingly gave orders for the erection of two buildings, one of which should be fixty feet in length by twenty in breadth, for the accommodation of the fick. and another of the fame extent, but two ftories in height, for the reception of the convaleicents; and fuch was the difpatch of the workmen employed in that bufinefs, that both were compleated in about eight days.

Previous to this the fick, the convalescent and the dying were all crowded together, and the apartments were by no means fufficient for the number of the difeased; but by this humane attention, the convalescents were separated from the fick, and from that time the number of those who recovered at that hospital was much greater in proportion than it had been before. There was likewise other circumstances which no doubt greatly contributed to this happy change. The attendants and nurses, at first appointed for the care of the fick, were in general perfons of rather indifferent character, and of course that attention was not paid to the fick which the Commiffioners The truth is that at the commencecould have wifhed. ment of this melancholy bufinefs, fear pervaded the flouteft heart and terror was depicted in the countenances of most people; hence many perfons of irreproachable character and humane dispositions, who in other circumstances would have been very willing to affift their fellow crcatures, were deterred from entering on fo perilous an undertaking. The Health Commissioners, therefore, to whom the care of this Hospital was committed, had no Nurfes and attendants must be had, and as they choice. could not procure the most proper perfons, they were obliged to be contented with fuch as they could obtain.

The cafe, however, was now changed. People began to recover from the panic with which they had been ftruck, and notwithstanding every discouraging circumstance, many were found whole humanity would not permit them to withhold from their fellow creatures that affiftance which they in a fimilar fituation had a right to expect; nurfes of good character were accordingly found, and the former improper perfons were difmified. Doctor Bayley, the Health Officer, whole character as a phylician is too well known to require any panegyric, aided by two affiftants, viz. Doctor Douglass and Doctor Gregory, attended on the fpot, and in a fhort time the greatest order and regularity was introduced; the patients were treated with the utmost care and tenderness; the nurses and attendants difcharged their respective duties with fidelity; and Belle vue inficad of being confidered as the anti-chamber of the grave, began to be viewed by many of the afflicted as a place where they flood a greater chance of recovery than any where elfe.

That cleanlines is not only very conducive to health, ¹ but that it contributes greatly to the removal of diforder from those who are afflicted, and also very much tends to prevent the spreading of infection amongst their attendants will fearcely be denied. The experience of every one who has been conversant amongst those afflicted with peftilential diforders, in every age and in every country abundantly confirms this fact; and furely this excellent prefervative and remedy was never better observed than here.

Upon the commissioners taking possible films of this place, the walls, timber, and every part both infide and outfide were whitewashed, and the practice of whitewashing the infide every week, ten days or fortnight, according to the fcason of the year, and number of fick, was steadily pursurfued fince its first establishment. Another practice never omitted was, that if at any time in the course of a person's being confined with fever, his bed, shirt or linen were stained or foiled by vomiting or otherwise, they were immediately removed and replaced with clean ones; befides the linnen and bed clothes of the fick were usually changed every day or two, if even those extraordinary circumstances did not occur. These means, as a substance at this Hospital.

The whole number of perfons admitted from August 1st to 3d. November, fince which time none have been received, was three hundred and eighty-nine, of whom two hundred and eighty-nine were from the city and one hundred feamen; of the former one hundred and feventy two died and one hundred and feventeen were difcharged. The latter were more fortunate, for of them only thirtythree died and the other fixty-feven were difcharged.

From the above flatement, which may be depended upon as correct, the following queftion naturally occurs. How came it that a much greater proportion of feamen recovered at this Holpital, than of those fent thither from the city? The answer is this. The feamen were in general fent there in the first stage of the diforder, whereas many of our citizens from the fears which they entertained of that Hofpital, could not be prevailed upon to be removed thither till they were past recovery. In confirmation of this I may add that of a good many people whom I myfelf have feen previous to their being carried thither, by far the greater part of those who were removed on the first attack recovered, whereas to those who remained till the diforder had acquired a greater degree of malignancy little elfe was to be expected but death. Indeed feveral died within a few hours after their entrance in the Hofpital and more than a third in two days. There is one thing very remarkable with refpect to the attendants at this Holpital, which ought not to be omitted. Their fituation to most people must no doubt have appeared peculiarly dangerous, as they were literally furrounded with peftilence. It fo happened, however, that neither nurfes, nor washerwomen caught the infection. The boatmen too belonging to the Health-Office, who entered the Hofpital at all times and were not only engaged in bringing the lick from the city and fhipping, but likewife in removing them from place to place, enjoyed a ftate of perfect health; and of those perfons who accompanied their friends and relatives, flayed with them and nurfed them, there is not a lingle inftance of an individual being infected. In fhort, Dr. Douglass was the only perfon refiding there who was feized with fever; but he had been in the habit of occasionally visiting his friends in the city, and three days previous to his being taken ill, had flept in a houfe the vicinity of which was highly infected; and it is more than probable that his fickness was occasioned by that cause.

From the above, and many other facts which might be mentioned, it amounts to a certainty that this fever will not fpread in a pure air. For this reafon the inhabitants of the country have little or no reafon of being afraid to receive the fick who remove from town, nor of thole who are taken ill with fever after leaving the city. for, as is obferved by Mr. Noah Webster, junior, in his concluding obfervations to a collection of papers on the fubject of bilious fevers, published in the year 1796. "The panic that feized the whole continent, when the difease in Philadelphia, is now found to have been needless and without just cause; and it is prefumed, that fuch inhuman caution and barbarous measures as were adopted on that occasion, will never again difgrace our country."

Having thus given an account of the Hofpital at Bellèvue, and of the treatment of the fick, I now proceed to point out the manner of administering relief to fuch fick perfons as could not be accommodated there, or the fituation of whole perfons or families rendered their removal improper or inconvenient.

With refpect to accommodations there was no doubt a confiderable difficulty previous to the erection of the two additional buildings which I have already mentioned; but these being compleated, that difficulty was entirely removed.

When individuals, who had no families were feized with the diforder, and were incapable of providing for themfelves the necessary relief, it was the wifh of the committee that they fould be removed to Bellevue as fpeedy as By which means the progress of the diforder posible. might be arrefled, whill the chance of their recovery was as great at least if not greater than if they had remained in But to separate children from their parents, hulthe city. bands from their wives, or wives from their hufbands, or in fhort to have removed contrary to their inclinations, a fingle individual from any family, where perhaps they had refolved to remain by each other, to the last extremity, would have been an act of the greateft inhumanity. For fuch, therefore, it was neceflary that provision should be made by the committee.

They accordingly being fensible of the miferable fituation to which the poor must be reduced by the fuspension of all business and the distress they must fusfer when attacked by disease, devoted their fole and undivided attention to their relief.

For this purpole they advertifed in the public prints, that the more easily and effectually to answer the end of their benevolent appointment, they would daily attend at the Ahns-House from 9 to 1 and from 3 to 6 afternoon, to receive the applications of the fick, the widow and orphan, or their friends in their behalf, and to grant such relief as the liberality of the Common Council of the city had directed.

The Common Council, at an early period of the diforder, had borrowed a fum of money to be appropriated towards the above benevolent purpole, and about the latter end of September, Mr. John Murray, junior, a refpectable merchant of this city, generoufly offered to the Committee to guarantee a farther loan of ten thoufand dollars, if it fhould be wanted; but the charitable donations received from different parts of this flate, from New-Jerfey and Connecticut; and alfo from many of our own wealthy citizens rendered this meafure unneceffary. By their beneficence and humanity the Committee were enabled to afford to the necefficious a confiderable degree of comfort, of which they would otherwife have been de prived. Liberal donations of money, produce, &c. (a lift of which is annexed) were daily received and diffributed as each particular cafe feemed to require.

As during the ravages of this dreadful diforder, medical aid was an object of the first concern, it may not be improper to mention the manner in which the poor were accommodated in this respect. Early in the tickness many of our most comment physicians had left the city, and feveral of those who remained had paid the last debt to nature. Hence the business of practitioners was greatly increased, and the fituation of the indigent became peculiarly diftress to administer to therefore, employed three physicians to administer to therelief of such sick as unfortunately became objects of their appointment, viz. Doctors Hugh M^cLean, Daniel M. Hitchcock, and Adolphus C. Lent.

The extreme affiduity and humanity which these gentlemen difplayed in the difcharge of their duty, is well known to the afflicted poor; and places their conduct in fuch a point of view as to be far above any panegyric of mine. To no perfon could their diligence be better known than to me, and in justice to them I think it my duty to declare that notwithstanding the great fatigue and danger to which they were continually exposed, they with the greatest alacrity daily fultained the perilous talk of vifiting and administering the necessary medicine to hundreds of their afflicted fellow creatures. From morning to night they were inceffantly engaged; nor did any of them, when called upon to fee a patient, even at the most unseafonable hours, hefitate a moment to wait upon them, let the diforder be Thanks to heaven their valuable lives ever fo malignant. are fpared, and long, very long, may they live in the grateful remembrance of their fellow citizens. How many owe their fafety to their skill and attention it is not easy to determine; but this far may be fafely afferted, that there are many now in good health, who but for their skill and attention would have been tenants of the grave. But had the attention of the committee been confined to procuring phyficians for the fick, it would have been productive of little good, for I have known many cafes where the hulband and wife with fome others of the family were fo grievouily afflicted as to be incapable of furnishing each other even with a cup of water.

For fuch perfons nurfes were therefore to be provided at the public expence; and here the fame difficulty at first occurred in procuring good ones as at Bellevue. This, however, was foon got over, as the committee having advertifed that nurfes of good character were wanted, to whom generous wages would be paid, a fufficient number of decent people readily offered their fervice. Some indeed were found to act improperly; but when the cafe was repreferred to the Committee, they were difmiffed and others fubfituted in their stead.

But befides procuring nurfes for the relief of the poor, the committee were frequently under the neceffity of geting them for fome of those in affluent circumstances, whose friends had probably fled, or who, if they remained, knew not to whom they should apply for the neceffary help. To these, likewife, the committee directed their attention.

Before I quit this article, it may not be improper to lay before my readers the fituation of the City Dilpenfary during this time of general calamity. The following is An exact return of patients admitted at that humane in fitu-

The truftees of the Difpenfary in their report on this interesting subject, make the following very judicious remark, "The great proportion of cases of the Yellow Fever in this statement, whilst it affords the most undeniable evidence of the utility of the inftitution, is also an honorable proof of the talents and affiduity of their physician Doctor Hugh M'Lean, more especially when it is confidered that the objects consisted of the poorest and most defitute class of citizens."

As the diforder continued to make farther progress, the committee found the calls on their humanity daily encrease.

The indigent fick were indeed fupplied with medical aid and nurfes; but it was neceffary that provision fhould be made for their maintainance, and alfo for a number of families, the heads of which not being able to find any employment, were in the greateft diffrefs.

With a view to relieve fuch perfons, the committee eftablifhed three repofitories and cook fhops, one at Cliffftreet, another at No. 159 Chatham-ftreet and the third at the head of Division-ftreet, from whence fuch indigent and diffreffed fick, as were deprived of the means of providing for themfelves, were liberally fupplied with foups, boiled meat, bread, candles, and other proper and neceffary articles fuitable to their fituation.

Perhaps, in fuch a calamity, no effablifhments could have been devifed of more general utility than thefe cook houfes; the fituation of many of the fick being fuch, as would not admit of their nurfes leaving them to drefs the neceffary provifions; to which it may be added, that if money had been given to fome of them for the purchafe of neceffaries, it would have very probably been expended for articles, which, inftead of contributing to the relief of the fick, might have been highly detrimental, or it might have been appropriated to their own ufe. I may likewife obferve, that if pecuniary aid had been been afforded to fome of the more thoughtlefs and diffipated poor, they would very probably have fpent it, in procuring for themfelves a temporary gratification, whilft their ftarving families remained neglected.

In confirmation of this, I shall adduce one instance out of a few others, of a similar nature which came under wa own observation. The wife of a perfon whom I had occallen to fee, in the difcharge of my duty, was dangeroufly ill of the prevailing fever. She lay in a damp cellar and was defitute of every necessary and comfort. Of money cutualical to me by the committee for the relief of the diftreffed, I therefore left with the hufband two dollars, one of which I willed to be appropriated to the purchase of half a load of wood, and the other for fuch little articles as might be immediately neceffary for his wife and child. I called again at the house a few hours after, but instead of finding the money applied as I expected, I found the man in a flate of intoxication, and totally regardlefs and infentible of the lituation of his afflicted wife, who was then in the agonies of death. She died foon after; the funeral was conducted by ftrangers, by whom likewife their child about fix years of age, was carried to the Alms-houfe, whill the unhappy hulband remained in a flate of infenfibility, knowing or caring very little about what had happened.

I am happy, however, in obferving, that fuch remarks mult be underflood as applying to very few, for almoft in every inflance, parents and children; hufbands and wives, and in flort all those living in the fame family were difpofed to contribute to the very utmost in their power, towards the relief of their afflicted relatives.

The number of those, who received their daily fubfiftence from these cook houses, during the greatest part of the calamity, amounted to between 1600 and 2000 perfons, of whom many were helpless fick, widows and orphans; whill eight hundred people were, at the fame time, supported in the Alms-house, out of funds provided by law.

But the ample donations and very liberal contributions, which as I have already observed, were collected in many places, for our relief, whill it reflected the higheft honour, on the donors, and domanded our warmeit gratitude, alfo enabled the committee to relieve many of the diffrested in a different manner.

The cook houles were certainly highly ufeful; but there were many fick and indigent, who lived at a confiderable diffance from either of them, to whom it would have been very inconvenient to have procured from thence the meetility providions; and the circumflances of others feemed likewife to require affistance of a different nature

The produce which came from various parts of the country for the relief of the indigent, except what was fem to the cook-houfes by order of the committee, was depofited in a flore oppofite the Alms-houfe; from whence upwards of five hundfed families were from time to time relieved by donations in neceffaries, fuch as beef, pork, mutton, flour, fowls, indian meal, potators, turnipr, &c. For the relief of thefe, the committee likewife expended a great deal of money, by giving them occafionally fuch finall fums as the fituation of their families feemed to require; and feveral widows, who upon the death of their hufbauds, wifhed to remove to that place in the country where their relatives and friends refided; being deflitute of the means of carrying themfelves and children thither, were alfo affifted.

I have already mentioned, that the committee when first. organized, had advertifed, that they would meet daily at the Alms-house, from 9 to 1, and 3 to 6, for the purpole of attending to the benevolent object of their appointment; but, in a fhort time the applications of the fick and indigent became fo exceedingly numerous, that they were not able, during these hours, to determine on all-They, therefore, affembled during the their requests. greatest part of this awful visitation at about eight in the morning, and continued their fitting, till feven, and fometimes eight, in the evening, allowing themfelves only a bare half hour for dinner. For my part, when I think of the extreme fatigue and danger which these gentlemen encountered, and the conftant rifque they ran of catching infection, many of those individuals who came thither to folicit affiltance, having fever upon them, I confider their prefervation, if not miraculous, at least highly providential. Two of them, indeed, viz. Alderman Gabriel Furman and Alderman Theophilus Beckman, as also our worthy Mayor, whole attention to the duties of his office during this distreffing period, is above all praife, were attacked by the peftilence, but, thanks to the Almighty, they foon recovered, and regardless of danger, immediately repaired to their poft, and along with their colleagues went through the fatiguing bufiness of their appointment with alactity to the laft.

It need fcarcely be obferved, that the tafk of the committee in administering relief, in fuch a fituation, would in many cafes be delicate, embarraffing and difagreeable; for had they given indiferiminately to every perfon who folicited aid, liberal as the contributions of our fellow citizers were, they would have been productive of little utility to those who were really in need.

The donations were certainly given for the relief of the indigent fick, and for widows and orphans of this defcription; but fuch was the meannefs of fome poffeffed of confiderable property, and even proprietors of houfes, that they too became applicants for part of a fund exclusively intended for the relief of the helplefs.

It was fortunate that every individual of the Committee were either natives of this city, or at leaft had a long time refided in it. They were, of courfe, generally qualified to judge how far the tales of woe related by many of the applicants for charity were true. There were, however, numbers with whom they could not be acquainted, particularly foreigners, who had only for a flort time refided in this country.

To afcertain the truth of their complaints, when they appeared doubtful, the Committee had feveral attendants, part of whofe bufinefs it was to repair to the refpective refidences of fuch applicants, to enquire into their circumflances and to report accordingly. It was, likewife, the duty of thefe perfons to vifit the indigent fick, to examine into their fituations, to reprefent their cafes, to relieve their immediate wants out of money entrulled to them for that purpofe, and in fhort to do every thing which they might be directed by the Committee, or their own prudence might fuggeft, towards the mitigation of the fufferings of individuals, or to ftop the progrefs of the deadly peftilence.

The fituation of thefe men was, no doubt, perilous in the extreme; but fuch was the goodnefs of Divino Providence, that out of cleven fo employed by the Health Committee and the Health Commiffioners, one only loft nis life, viz. Mr. Wynant Mitchell, whofe character can e fummed up in a very few words. He was an industrius, benevolent and honeft man, and has left a wife and ree children to lament his lofs. Mr. Munmouth Purcy, bo volunteered in the fame fervice likewife fell a victim his philanthropy. Having thus defcribed the manner in which the poor were relieved throughout the city, it may not be improper to direct the attention of my readers to the fituation of the poor prifoners in the Debtor's Apartment, or what is commonly called the New Gaol. The diforder, which prevailed more or lefs, in the city, likewife made its appearance here: It, however, in a flort time entirely fublided, owing in a great measure to the indefatigable industry of Mr. William W. Parker, the jailor, in cleaning and washing the different apartments, by which means the farther fpreading of the infection was prevented.

The fituation of the debtors at the commencement of the general calamity afforded a picture of diffreds and horror fcarcely equalled by any thing we have hitherto feen reprefented. Their number at first amounted to 163 and whilst others were enjoying advantages refulting from the wholefome laws of the state, these individuals were pent up in the midst of pestilence, deprived of the privilege of feeking their felf prefervation, exposed to the unfatiated revenge of individuals, and seemed in every respect delivered up as victims to the malignancy of the common enemy.

But the danger of infection was not the only evil to which these unfortunate men were exposed; for it is well known that though a person confined for crimes is support. ed by the state, a poor debtor has no other dependence than on the benevolence of his friends and the charity of the Humane Society: But upon the approach of this general diftres, many of their friends, who would have wil-"ngly affisted them had fled, others were fick, and feverals no doubt fo reduced by the general calamity as to be fcarcely capable of supporting themselves. In this fituation, therefore, not only pestilence, with fearcely a probable chance of escape, but also famine flared them in the face.

Their cafe was reprefented to the Committee by Mr. Parker, and they were immediately supplied with plenty of provisions; and this was from time to time repeated during the existence of the sever, as often as their necessities seemed to require.

But the prifoners were indebted to Mr. Parker for exertions of a different nature. By his perfonal affiduitiesthe second strategy for some care of indigent second to prove the second to angle applied of and a second second strategy applied of the method of a mat be a great conforming to them to be please and the care of a man poffelied of to much humany yes Mr. Parker. Certainly fuch conduct ought to be near a reflect only as a tribute of applaule; but as a first second reflect who may be finilarly fituated, to do the lower. In a word, Mr. Parker's treatment of his prilower, when known, will ever meet with the approbation or all group enigence.

I fhall new coachide this article, with refpect to the poor, by a few general obfervations. During the whole of this call in Pour period, fuch was the extraordinary liberality of our fellow citizens in granting donations; and fuch the unreanting attention of the Committee in diffributing them, that notwithflanding the diffreffed were by far more numerous than at any previous period in this city; yet there was no individual at a lofs for the neceffaries of life for medical and, or for nurfes, provided the cafe was made known to the Committee, who not only fat with unwearied patience from moning to night to liften to the inceffant applications of hundreds; but as has been already obterved, had people employed to feek out for objects of different.

For of this, while respect to Mr. Parker's humanity, opprared in fome on police prints under an abonymous figurature; but from luch a fource of cardle accured with certainty. The bosever, gives no releafare to on a vectors, that from what I have learnt from gentlemen of cera-lay, but decay; port of this awful period were price easy no man caud have acttioned with a backet of the high res.

There is one class of distressed objects, whom, as I . omitted to mention in the preceding pages it may not be improper to introduce here, viz. the children of neceffitous perfons, whofe parents were cut off by death. Mr. Mathew Carey, in his hiltory of the Malignant Fever preva lent in Philadelphia in the year 1793, observes, that the Bettering-Houfe (Alms-Houfe) there, in which fuch helplefs objects had been usually placed, was barred against them; "Many of these little innocents (fays he) were actually fuffering for want of even common neceffaries. The death of their parents and protectors, which should have been the ftrongeft recommendation to public charity, was the very reason of their distress, and of their being shunned as a peftilence. The cafe, however, was widely different with us; for no fooner had the parents of thele little ones expired, than if they were not taken care of by fome of their friends or relations, there was always fome perfons of humanity who would reprefent their cafe to the Committee, by whole orders they were immediately removed to a part in the Alms-Houfe appropriated to their reception.

By the above remark, however, I would by no means wish to be understood as throwing any reflection against the citizens of Philadelphia for being deficient in point of humanity. On the contrary, many of the inhabitants difplayed a benevolence and philanthropy which in fo awful a period may be equalled, but never can be furpafied. But the Yellow Fever was at that time a new diforder, or at leaft little known in the United States : and terrific as it really was, both inits appearance and effects, it still excited more terror than was necessary or just. Hence in many cafes humanity, friendship, parental and filial affection were all fwallowed up in a regard to felf prefervation; and this will ever be the cafe in any country when an all devouring peftilence makes its fir/t appearance. But in the last autumn the diforder was better known, as it had repeatedly vifited fome of our most populous cities, and experience had fufficiently evinced, that fuch perfons as confined themfelves to their houses, run little, if any greater rifque of infection than those who were constantly conversant amongst the lick. Hence, if it should be the Divine pleafure, that we should again be visited either here or in any other place of the United States, by this awful diforder, its horrors will, in all probability, be greatly alleviated, as few will be found fo unforous as to be unwilling to difcharge the duties of humanity to the diffreffed.

Before I conclude this article, I cannot help taking notice of the difficits in which fome poor people were involved in confequence of the rigid manner in which fome unfeeling landlords have exacted their rentz. Forgetful that their poor tenants had been fick, that they had large families and that they had been able to earn nothing during a calamitors leafon of three months, they notwithitanding infilted on the immediate payment of the original flipulated bargain: In confequence of which, the little property which these poor people polfelled were fold by the conftable at vendue, and they exposed in confequence thereof to the unnoff difficfs. It was natural in this time of general calamity for every unfortunate individual to, look up to the committee for relief; the donations, were intended for the immediate exigence of the indigent and fick. not for the payment of houfe-rent; for, liberal as they were, had the committee thought proper to appropriate them in this manner, they would have fpeedily been abforbed in fuch a manner as to fill the pockets of the rich, whilft the poor would have remained in the fame flate of mifery and diffrefs.

But whill fome landlords acted with the utmoft rapacity, the conduct of many was fuch as reflects the greateft honour upon their characters. Of these fome forgave the rent for one quarter altogether; and others have confiderably indulged their tenants by procrassing the payment till fuch true as they should find it convenient. Men of this last defeription have the ineffable fatisfaction of having contributed to the relief of the diffress of gain, teck only for happinels in their gold, which, if they had not been determined to be blind, they could have cafily teen, would contribute very little towards relieving them trom the vellow fever or way other pestilential diforder.

OF THE NAMES OF THE PERSONS INTERRED

IN THE SEVERAL BURYING GROUNDS IN THE CITY OF NEW-YORK, AND AT BELLEVUE, AND POTTERS-FIELD,

FROM AUGUST 1-TO NOVEMBER 14, 1798.

BEFORE the Reader begins to perufe the following lift, I would with to apprize him of the materials from which it is compofed. They are the books of the different fextons and other perfons having the charge of burying grounds in this city, at Potter-Field and Bellevue. It has however unfortunately happened that the fextons of two of the fmalleft congregations were abfent during a great part of the calamity, and in thefe the names of the dead were only given by memory, and in other inftances, the books have not been kept with that accuracy of which could have been withed. To afcertain with precifion the names of all the deceafed, their occupations, &c. I have ufed my utmoft exertions. With this view I have compared the books of the fextons with the lift kept by the Health-Committee, and wherever there was a difference, I have, by perfonal application to the friends of the deceafed, endeavoured as far as pofible to reflify the miltake, and allo where the orthography appeared erroneous, to correct it as well as I could, and by annexing to the names, the trade, occupation, age, place of nativity or fome other circumfance to point out the particular perfon intended and thus to remove the doubts of people at a diffance. But whatever pairs may be taken in a thing of this fort, it cannot be expected that it will be entirely free from errors or defects; but I truft it will be found as complear, as confidering the difficulties attending it, could be expected and that in almoft every inftance it will be found faisfactory.

C. Annexed to fome Names denotes that the Perfon died in the Country. The words printed in Italic after any name, denotes the native country of that perfon.
